

Strategies to Learn Online

You just signed up for online learning, but you're feeling a bit overwhelmed and you have no idea where to begin. You have a set goal in mind and you're determined to show your mom that this WILL work and you're gonna make it.

Take a deep breath with me. Let's start from the basics. What does it mean to learn?

What we're really looking for is to trap knowledge. So... you saw Freddy's Basic Programming Course and now want to get all of your courses approved like if you were playing Pokemon Go and catch them all.

First things first. Which learning type do I fit into? How will that take me through the different learning stages? And... speaking of all this... which type of student am I?

Great! You were able to identify that you have a Concrete Experience type of learning. It's something along the lines of your ex has now taken the face of Voldemort and you can't go out with anyone that has the same name without getting nauseous. If this sounds like you, take hold of the Active Student profile, conquer your fears and look for new experiences with an open mind.

Let's say that your problem comes with somewhat of an attention déficit and you were never able to stay still. It gets a bit complex when you're the one that's now in charge of your education.

But worry not! If you saw the video "Los beneficios de la técnica Pomodoro en la educacion en linea" and stayed wanting more, here we help you get the most of it.

Do they often tell you something important and a minute later you need to ask again?
Were you inspired by taking notes and now not even you can understand them?
Are you reading slower than your younger brother?

You'll learn to get over all this and MUCH more in this course.

You haven't taken the easy way out by starting your online courses. Together we'll show your mom that this computer thing DOES pay off.
